ARBEITSVORHABEN

Berlin Trilogy

The temptation to assert meaning, rather than to make visible, is ancient. Landscape, memorial, monument, and our memory of what happened to us are constantly in dispute.

I propose, by way of a photographic investigation in Berlin, the following "section":

Street photographs

Museum. Monument. Past.

The history of the city as seen through its collections and memorials, the way they are shown and stored.

Europe.

Using public modernist and post-modernist architecture in Berlin as a stage to produce an image of governance.
